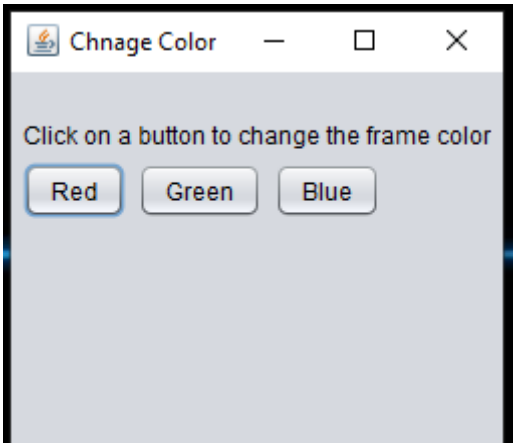
Object Oriented Programming using Java

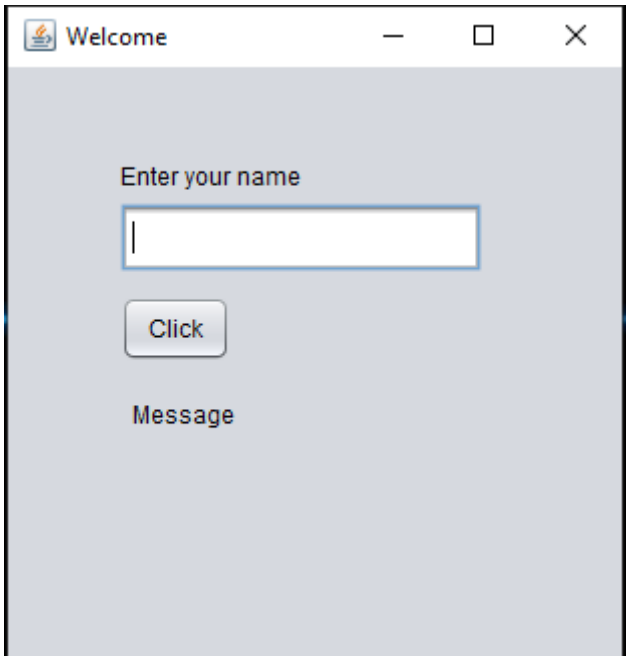
Assignment - 10

GUI Development and Event Handling using Swing

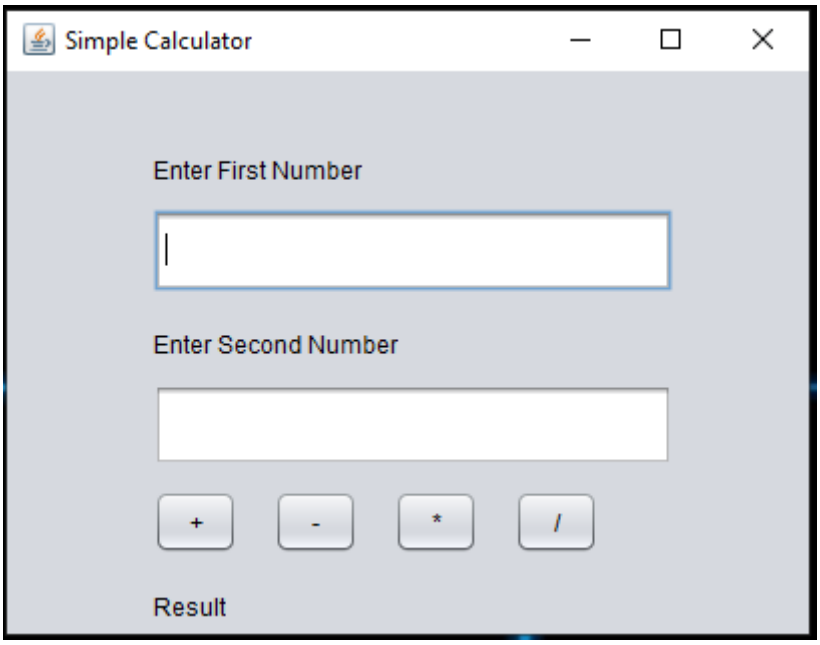
1. Design the following frame with a label and three button. Label is used to display the text and three button have three different color name mentioned. Once clicked on the button the frame background color should be changed.



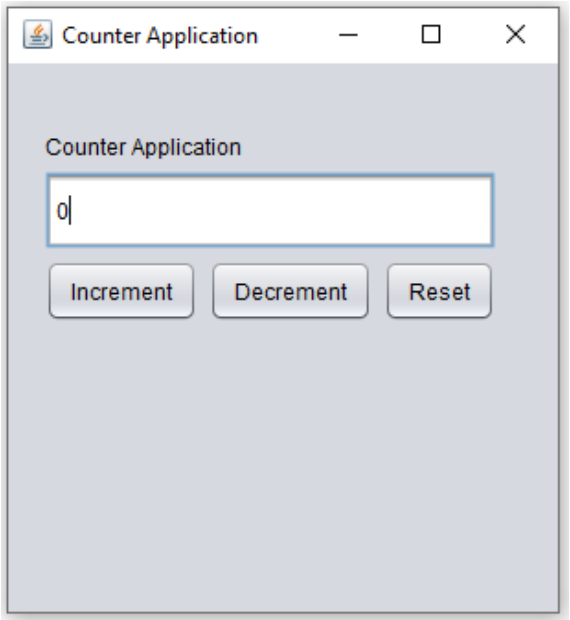
2. Design the following frame, and display welcome message with the name, on message label in green color once clicked on the button. If no name is given on the text box display “Please enter your name” in the message label in Red color.

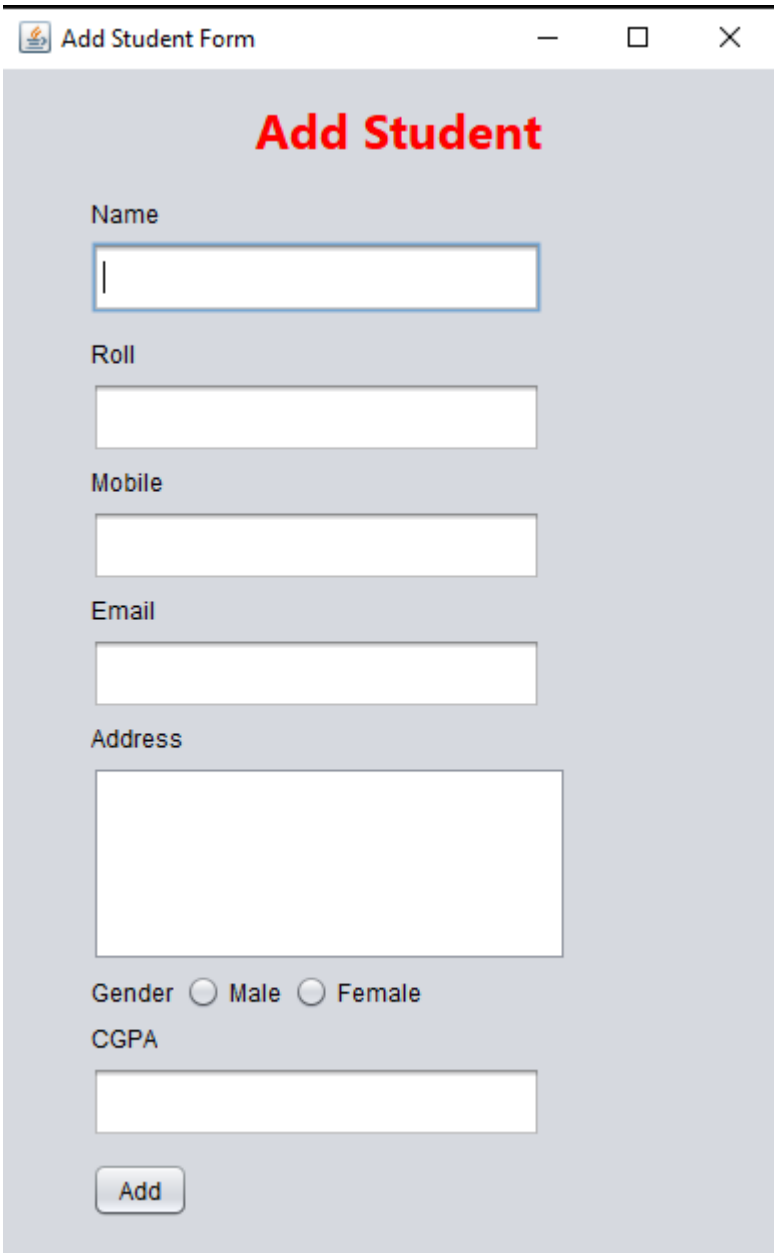


3. Design the simple calculator given below and add events to all the button to perform respective mathematical operations. Display the result in the result label.



4. Design the following frame. Make the text box read-only. On the increment button click the textfield value should be incremented by 1, on the decrement button the textfiled value should be decremented by 1 and once the reset is clicked, the textfield value must be set to 0.





5. Design the following frame. When the add button is clicked display all the data given in different input field in the console.